Jury Finds Viereck 'Guilty'

WASHINGTON— A federal court jury found George Sylvester Viereck, alleged pro-German propagandist, guilty of violating the foreign agents' registration act.

The jury, out for nine hours, found him guilty on all six counts, charging him with failing to list all foreign principals for whom he worked prior to Pearl Harbor and failing to give the state department a comprehensive statement of his activities.

Justice Bolitha J. Laws had instructed the jury of nine men and three women that they could find Viereck guilty of any one or all the six counts.

He stressed, however, that Viereck had the right to carry on propaganda activities in behalf of his foreign employers—"even the German reich"—so long as he revealed required information to the state department.

Viereck was convicted in March, 1942, and served a year of an 8-months-to-2-years' sentence before the original case was remanded by the supreme court.

Under the new conviction, Viereck faces a possible maximum sentence of 12 years and $6000 fine. It was expected sentence would be imposed about July 23.

The prosecutors contended Viereck was a paid agent of the Nazi regime hired to furnish information which could be used to foster pro-Nazi and anti-British sentiment in the United States. He also, the prosecution contended, forwarded material concerning United States defenses and production.

The government contended that Viereck registered only as a correspondent for a Munich newspaper and the Germany Library of Information, although actually he was an agent of the Nazi government paid to send weekly reports to the Reich and to promote pro-German, anti-British feeling in the United States.

Viereck contended that he had properly registered under the law at the time, which required his statement of employment as correspondent for two German principals only. He claimed that his activities in all other lines, to keep the U. S. out of war, were not that of a paid agent, but that he exercised his rights as a citizen, on his own time, with his own money, to prevent war, by co-operating with members of both Houses to that end. He says this country was neutral and it was no crime to communicate with German officials. Other citizens, he states, communicated with British and Russian officials.

Viereck was remanded to D. C. jail pending pronouncement of sentence. His attorneys asked for a new trial and if denied an appeal is contemplated.

Viereck Testifies

WASHINGTON— Alert and tense in a neat blue suit, George Sylvester Viereck took the stand in his own defense for the first time since March last year, when he was first brought to trial on charges of violating the Foreign Agents Registration Act.

The German agent asserted, in reply to questioning by Defense Counsel John J. Wilson, that he did not and never had advocated Nazi doctrines for this country. However, he went on, he recognized National Socialism's value to Germany, as a means of restoring her importance and "self respect."

While admitting that he had "always taken an intense interest in all politics", Viereck emphatically denied being a disciple of Nazism.

As the defense opened its case before Justice Bolitha J. Laws and the jury of nine men and three women, Wilson pictured the defendant as a man of high American ideals in whose work as a German agent there was "nothing disloyal".

"Not at War"

"We were not at war," he declared, & the Muenchener Neueste Nachrichten for which Viereck was correspondent "was not a party organ." It was just a large paper, over which the German government exercised no more control than it did over any other newspaper in the country, he said.

Viereck's other activities — publishing anti-British and anti-war books. and working through American Congressmen to distribute millions of pieces of isolationist propaganda—were done purely on his own, according to his attorney. He, in common with "other loyal Americans" like Prescott Dennett and the late Senator Lundeen, was simply promoting a cause "dear to his heart—the cause of isolationism".

In its behalf, Wilson acknowledged Viereck invested thousands of dollars. But it was his own money, he stated.

If he "passed on" the German Consul General's speeches, Viereck did it "for old time's sake", and not for money, the jury was informed.

"If you believe that there is free speech in this country . . . and if you believe that a man's money is his own after he has earned it, you must acquit the defendant of the charges," they were told.

Hoped to Elude British Censor

Viereck said he sent weekly reports on the American political scene to several European destinations, including Dr. Hans Dieckhoff of the German Foreign Office, in order that at least one of them would slip by British censors and reach their ultimate destination—Dr. Gieselher Wirsing, editor of a Munich newspaper which Viereck listed with the State Department.

The Government contends that the reports actually were prepared for the German Foreign Office and that Viereck kept this fact concealed when he registered with the State Department. Copies of the reports were also sent to addresses in Bern, Lisbon and Holland.

Each report was headed with the initials "G. K.," which the defendant said were the initials of the Munich editor. Asked by Mr. Rover what use was made of the reports, Viereck said some of them were published and others used as background for preparation of editorials.

Throughout his testimony Viereck answered questions without hesitation. Several times Defense Counsel Rover cautioned him not to volunteer information, but simply to answer questions.

Mrs. Viereck described her husband's daily routine in New York, where the couple lived for many years. She said he did most of his work at home and frequently worked late at night. Their two sons, Peter and George, jr., are in the service, "somewhere in Africa", she said.

Court Holds FBI Search Illegal

Ruling that Federal Bureau of Investigation agents illegally searched the Fallbrook home of Roscoe A. Coffman, 51, Federal Judge Leon R. Yankwich has directed that documents they seized may not be used as evidence in Coffman's trial on charges of counseling two men to evade the draft:

The judge dismissed two counts in an indictment containing "aiding and abetting" charges, leaving only a charge of counseling his nephew, Lloyd Coffman, of North Hollywood, and Robert L. Reed of Alhambra to evade the draft.

Trial of the former charge will be held here August 3, with action on the other in Los Angeles.

Moscow Mass Trials To Be Staged in D. C.

A jury in Washington, D. C. found the German propagandist George S. Viereck, "guilty", again.

Previous experience demonstrated that such findings are not conclusive. Viereck might and might not be guilty as charged.

The prosecution contends he should have fully outlined all his activities as a propagandist against the war, in his statements to the secretary of state; Viereck replies that he did, as far the law required, but that as a private citizen he was not required to list his activities in politics to keep this country out of war. The whole question, then, hinges on whether he did receive pay from the Reich for what Viereck claims were his privileged activities as an American citizen.

His previous conviction on the same offense was reversed by the Supreme Court.

Viereck as a propagandist is no concern of The Broom. He was well aware of his risks. But this "conviction" of a technical or actual violation of the statute is merely the prologue to more to come, and this concerns us very much, indeed.

33 other defendants, most of whom never knew Viereck, except from reading his name in the papers, are being linked to him in an alleged conspiracy of having been his tools, and tools of the Nazis, in spreading propaganda "to demoralize the armed forces of the U. S.", even before the war and since. Our editor among them.

I had not known Viereck till I met him in jail in Washington, D. C., yet I am charged to have conspired with him in the city of Washington, D. C., previously, even though up to that meeting in jail I had not been to D. C. since 1919. I had never corresponded nor in any way communicated with him. I am one of a number of die-hard anti-new-dealers, anti-labor-racket, and opposed to a dictatorship by communists, by any minority, even Jews, and for THIS crime I am being linked with Viereck, because I, too, opposed entry of the U. S. into the war before Pearl Harbor.

With the second jury verdict of "guilty" for Viereck, this taint is now to be spread to all whom the Attorney General's charge linked with Viereck in a conspiracy. A jury of men and women in D. C. who are not voters and do not know what voting citizens may do, from practical experience, are to sit in judgment on the 34, to decide whether we acted as voters or as agents of, and conspirators with, Nazis to keep this country out of war.

By staging a mass trial where Viereck, Pelley, Noble, Jones, all of whom have been previously found guilty on federal charges, are tied up in the alleged conspiracy, the prosecution expects to get a mass verdict, where it could not get individual verdicts of "guilty", if the individuals named were to be tried in their own bailivicks by a jury of their peers of voters who have engaged in political activities and know the difference between opposing a bunch of new dealers, labor racketeers, bureaucrats and committing treason against the U. S.

The San Diego Labor Leader stated the case recently when its editor called attention to the newspaper statements of the G. O. P., which the Labor Leader contended were strong enough to be treasonable, IF Hitler had paid for them; but since Hitler did not pay for them nobody is shot at sunrise.

How then is a D. C. jury going to decide whether the 34, most of whom are die-hard Republicans, exercised their privilege of free speech and free press, or whether they conspired with leading America First politicians and organizations to "demoralize the armed forces of the U. S."?

But such a mass trial in the war-hysteria of the national capital will terrorize enough people to keep their mouths shut and the press silent on the worst offenses of the administration during the 4th term campaign.

The prosecution figures that lack of funds will make convictions easy. How am I to pay the expenses of witnesses to bring them to Washington, D. C. to disprove the testimony of "experts" that in their opinion my attacks on Roosevelt, the new deal, Communists, Labor Racketeers and Jewish boycotters of The Broom, were my own personal opinion and not paid for with Nazi funds?!

When a jury is to decide my guilt or innocence upon the testimony and opinion of "experts", who are new deal professors or new deal employees, what chance has a snow ball in hell?

John L. Lewis was never hailed before a Grand Jury, but C. Leon de Aryan "demoralized the armed forces in Washington, D. C.", for de Aryan opposes labor racketeering.

Roosevelt's Policy in 1940

"The American Government's policy in regard to France, conducted under the direct supervision of President Roosevelt, had its roots since 1940 in the belief that many Frenchmen, perhaps a majority of them, were disinclined to associate themselves definitely either with the political group in France known as the Vichyites, or with the other political group in London called the Free French, who, in cooperation with the British government, have been operating under the leadership of Gen. Charles de Gaulle. It was our purpose to consolidate and to strengthen all the Frenchmen outside these two organized groups who, while unwilling to become emigres or to accept General de Gaulle's leadership, did, nevertheless, earnestly desire the defeat of Germany and the restoration of the French republic."—Demaree Bess in Sat. Eve. Post, 7-10-43.

Subversive Activities in U. S.

According to Senator Ralph O. Brewster, of Maine, a member of the Truman investigation committee, much of the war time confusion, waste, and extravagance is due to a definite new deal plan to destroy the small business man and farmer as a part of a program to change our form of government over to a form of national socialism.

This objective was obvious to many Americans almost from the beginning of the new deal in Washington. To those who have studied history and the lives of dictators, the repetition of the pattern meshes perfectly with the steps taken by the new deal since its inception. And again looking back into history, we find that war was almost invariably necessary to the success of a dictatorship and according to Senator Brewster, the new dealers are making the most of their opportunities along that line in this war. Senator Brewster said our boys are fighting abroad the very type of government which some of the new dealers are using the war as an opportunity to create here at home.

Asked if we were heading for a translation of totalitarianism, he said, "No, I have complete faith in the common sense of America and real Americans. I believe in the kind of America we have always known and the majority of Americans do too. All the public needs is information, plain talk. It's time to come out into the open and to let this pattern out into the open where real Americans can seet it."—Lewis A. Walmsley in the North Shores Sentinel.

Whose Commander-in-Chief ?

LOS ANGELES— Have you noticed that the President is now being called the "commander-in-chief?"

This is evidently used to cow civilians who exercise their constitutional rights to criticise executive acts.

This "commander-in-chief" stuff used in a civil sense is being implemented quite effectively by New Deal demagogues and high-pressure salesmen of mansions in cuckoo-land. It may in time even acquire, as someone has pointed out, the same power over the civilian population of the United States as the word fuehrer (leader) has in Germany and the word duce (also leader) has, or had, in Italy.

It's a subtle weapon to stop the pen and mouth of legitimate critics of anything that the Administration may order.

Even President Roosevelt now uses "commander-in-chief" loosely, it seems to me, for recently in one of his orders to mine strikers he said, "as President and commander-in-chief, I order and direct."

Now, the Constitution says very definitely: "The President shall be commander-in-chief of the Army and Navy of the United States and of the militia of the several states when called into the actual service of the United States."

This does not make the President commander-in-chief of the people at large, for if he were we would have a military form of government, which, of course, we have not.

There is political danger in the misuse of this title. And if we are fighting for the principles in the Constitution hadn't we better stick to the letter and spirit of it?

PEARL ONE

MAZDA AND AINYAHITA

When Ainyahita placed her foot upon a rock it would at once develop eyes and pleadingly gaze into her own, asking for hope, while ledges would tear themselves from their mountain range to which they had been fastened for thousands of years, and roll pleadingly before her feet, asking for a blessing. Ainyahita grew so beautiful that although but a maiden of less than a teen, pebbles could not resist temptation, but followed her as soon as her eyes glanced over the shores of Sanpu, making love to her.

Chapter II

As Ainyahita stood arrayed in her snow-white sacred garment of linen, fastened about her loins with a seventytwo-threaded cord of covenant, watching the spell of early dawn, the birds fluttered about her, raising their voices to a pitch higher than the notes of ethereal domains, while the beasts lying about her in the dust plead in tones lower than the rumblings of the bowels of the earth.

There she stood, the dew of heavenly morning, reciting holy spells and salutations unto the approach of day.

Suddenly, as if by magic, the heavens clove asunder and the sun stood out in his majesty like a princely bridegroom at break of day, the clouds forming wings of the Almighty about the sun, and the countenance of Mazda (The Lord God, or in this case "Thought Revealed") appeared before the glow of his majestic luminary as if garbed in the sacred temple veil.

A voice reached the ears of Ainyahita, carried upon the waves of ether and transformed over the currents of soft morning breezes. Ainyahita was almost startled, for she was absorbed in her sacred duties, when she heard:

"Ainyahita, thou flower of Paradise and gem of Arkana, hail to thee; hail to thy kin, and a thousand times hail to the most beautiful of all the beautiful: exercise of true religion".

Ainyahita bowed before the majesty, saying: "My Lord, my God, hail unto thee and all thy creations that are so wonderful; yea, so sublime that their presence alone suffice me to know thou art; bless me that I may grow to perform my duties in reclaiming the earth, to turn the desert into a paradise, a paradise most suitable unto God and His Associates to dwell therein".

"Ainyahita," said the Lord, "plant seeds*) of flowers unto thine own glory and seeds of flowers unto my memory and I shall grant thy wish."

Before Ainyahita could speak another word the birds had fled, the beasts retired and the cows patiently waited for attention by her hands. But of the vision there was no trace no sign.

* SEEDS: The seed is quite symbolic in all Eastern philosophies and a means of expounding and defining growth, development, unfoldment and maturity. The object lesson is to convey the true method of education, gaining of knowledge. The desire is to show how a little seed contains in its almost imperceptible glume the intelligence which develops into a mighty tree. A tree was planted at the birth of a child. A tree at death was planted to perpetuate the minds (ideas—Ed.) of the fathers in the minds of their children. By the life of a tree or its development the growth or possibilities of the child, a country, or a religion were divined.

(Editor's Note: Speaking of the "East"; it refers mostly to the lands situated in the central part of Asia, plateaus in Tibet, plateaus and valleys in the Hindu-Kush, Kuen-Lun, Himalayan ranges, all of which were the craddle and are today yet the refuge of the mystic Aryan philosophers and scientists of both sexes. Even today as in the days of Ainyahita, 12 thousand years ago or more, when the white race emerged from the yellow stock, those plateaus and valleys were desolate desert, with a little vegetation where spring water was available. It became the duty of the inhabitants to forrest the country, to irrigate where possible, produce gardens (paradise) and to make this task more attractive every emotional occasion was used to induce people to "plant a seed". When one studies the whole of modern religious rituals one will discover that it is nothing but a discipline for developing the harmony of mind, body and soul to obey the divine spirit within so that material needs should not usurp domination over the spiritual, as is the case with our "western" civilization. In THE Broom I have endeavored during the 12 and so years past to warn, and by example to show, that divine LAW permeates every corner of the universe and of our own being as well. Posterity when it studies our files will find them prophetic in the midst of the mass of common-place recordings of little squabbles and big doings. That thread of ever-present LAW exists in every issue and holds them together to one purpose, to make people think, to goad them into thinking, to reveal infinite possibilities in the midst of the commonplace.

CHATS WITH GLADYS

"When they arrested you, I noticed that the printer reduced the size of the paper and a good many advertisers dropped out. How do you manage to meet expenses? Do you need help?"

"In hoc signo vinces"

"You see, Gladys, there are many thoughtful people like yourself who think of these practical items. My work in these U. S. is to make people think and to the extent that I succeeded in my work, naturally, they think of practical matters as well. That is the very measure of my success. So those who are concerned about my work, as well as the future of the Republic, realize that what happens to me today will happen to them tomorrow. Foresighted people, then, set aside part of their earnings as insurance premium against the loss of the Republic and they invest some of it with me, as well as in other ways. Others do it from religious motives in the form of tithes. It all comes to the same. When a man is fighting their battles, they realize that it becomes more of a task than one person can carry, so they contribute their share. This enables me to meet my living expenses and the expenses of producing the paper and engaging in public activities necessary to the perpetuation of the Republic."

"Is it just your personal friends, Kosti, who are helping you carry on the work?"

"No, Gladys. My personal friends as a rule are expecting a lot of service free. Such is human nature. But those more distant who have gone through hell in life, in some form or another, appreciate what I am going through and they stand by me. And when I am in need badly, I simply holler and they answer. Of course, I prefer to have people mail me their contributions so I may devote my time to the work itself rather than getting of funds. The subscriptions just pay the printer."

WE MUST FACE THE FACTS ABOUT RUSSIA

"Kosti, did you read Max Eastman's article in the Readers Digest of July on Russia?"

"A friend gave me the copy and I also read the reprint in the Los Angeles Examiner. But after reading it all, still much remains unsaid."

"Then why don't you say it?"

"Because the moment I open my mouth on these matters, the Communists and their fellow travelers, through various labor organizations and other racketeering outfits, petition the President to have me indicted for "conspiracy" to create "disunity" in the war effort. That's the way it is done in "democratic" countries. The mob prevails. In civilized countries, like the Republic of the U. S. A. of America, that was before the New Deal, criminals were not released upon petition, as Earl Browder was, nor are people indicted upon mass petitions, of crimes compounded by the imagination of their persecutors."

"But, Kosti, I understood you to have told me time and again that the Creator is mightier than any combination of mortals, why then are you not telling the truth? Could it not survive and protect you?"

"When we have to deal with a new nest of vipers, we have to proceed in a manner by which we will survive them. Naturally, there are

But, in American history, this is the FIRST COURT CASE of its kind,—the first MASS POLITICAL indictments (now moribund),—the first attempt to CENTRALIZE TRIALS in Washington, D. C.,—and the first mass POLITICAL PERSECUTIONS since 1800.

GRAND JURY SYSTEM STARTED 1,000 YEARS AGO TO PROTECT CITIZENS AGAINST POWER OF KING

TWO FREAK INDICTMENTS (for "conspiracy") were dictated by a NEW DEAL Political Prosecutor, both of which were sworn and shown to be incompetent, invalid and without merit.

REPORTS by three U. S. SUPREME COURTS and one D. C. Court of Appeals condemned the New Deal Federal Prosecutor for his biased and eccentric conduct. In additon—

AFFIDAVIT HEREWITH alleges countless incidents of misconduct in the Grand Jury Room by the Special Assistant to the Attorney General, who insulted witnesses and dominated and coerced two grand juries for over 18 MONTHS, thus invalidating the indictments.

THIS is a brief historical essay on the RIGHTS and DUTIES of GRAND JURIES, showing how they were established in Anglo-Saxon lands as PROTECTORS AGAINST, and NOT as AGENCIES OF, OPPRESSION; written by a journalist (10th-generation American), acting as his own attorney.

Motion To Have Court Instruct Grand Jury On Laws Regarding Speech and Conspiracy in War Time

And now, to wit: April 21, 1943, comes Hudson DePriest, one of the defendants in the above entitled action, and in his own proper person moves, prays and petitions the Honorable Court to charge and instruct the grand jury now in session, and also any special grand jury that may be summoned, more fully regarding the grand juries' duties and obligations and especially regarding the laws of so-called sedition and conspiracy, as outlined and suggested in this motion—items, 1, 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6, to follow.

REASON AND NECESSITY FOR SUCH A CHARGE:

The justice and necesity of such a charge are apparent from the unprecedented character of the procedings now before this Honorable Court. The grand juries which were impaneled for the July, 1941, and October, 1942, terms of this court returned oppressive and futile indictments, Nos. 70,153 on July 21, 1942, and 71,203 on January 4, 1943, in which this petitioner-defendant and many others were jointly and unjustly accused and were never brought to trial.

Inquisition Drove Jews Out of Spain to Holland

Inquisition, in the history of the Roman Catholic Church, a tribunal for searching out, inquiring into, and condemning offenses against the Cannon Law, especially heresy, and taking means to have the offenders punished by the civil power. Torture was also used to extract evidence.

Nowhere in the world did the Inquisition find a more congenial soil than in Spain. There were in that country multitudes of Mohammedans and Jews, who, to shelter themselves from persecution, professed to be Christians, while all the time not merely practicing their former religious observances in secret but actually making proselytes to their respective faiths. In 1481 the Inquisition was established at Seville by Ferdinand and Isabella. Napoleon I suppressed it on Dec. 4, 1808 and it was abolished on Feb. 12, 1813, by the Cortes.

means and ways by which we can convey the truth and survive, but it is up to us to discover and materialize them. That's what makes the Creator immortal."

"You mean to say that you too, being mortal, will have to discover the means and ways used by the divine Creators to perpetuate truth and in that fashion, then, even the rabble rousers could not touch you without destroying themselves."

"Now you are getting nearer. You see, Communism and Nazism are basically one and the same thing. If it appears in Russia first, then in Spain, then Italy, finally in Germany and now here as New Deal, would it not make you curious to find out who is doing it?"

"You mean to say that some interests behind the scenes are pulling off Communism in Russia and Nazism in Germany, then New Deal in the U. S. A.?"

"I am merely pointing to the identy of ideology where suppression of individual initiative, directive, and private property is concerned.

"Max Eastman is pulling the mask off Russia in his article. But if you study Hitler's Germany you will find the identic procedure there. A few Nazis hold the valuable industrial stock in ALL of Europe, just as a few Communists rule Russia and live in luxury while the people toil for less than they received in Czarist days."

"But what would those people behind the scenes profit?"

"Suppose the U. S. also became ruled by a few corporations, or by a few New Dealers who are taking over in the "emergency" and the people couldn't make a living except by working for them; the gang that put it over would control those few as in Russia and in Germany if their "post-war" schemes jelled."

"I gather, you mean to say that totalitarianism has a common aim whether in Spain, Russia, Germany or the New Deal."

"Now you said it: its aim is destruction of the burgeois, or the common individual who calls his soul his own. The destruction of what we used to call the common American citizen, or his equivalent everywhere as the small businessman."

"But such a revelation is astounding, that millions of unwilling people should be fighting each other by forcing upon them Fascism and Communism when the final result is to exploit them all."

"Divide et Impera, my child, is the means of doing it. Divide the people, egg them on to hate each other, the rich against the poor and tax them all to fight each other. That's high finance."

"Now I am beginning to see why just one man profited in Spain from the civil war. He financed Franco."

"Yes, Gladys, and who financed Hitler when he was broke and had no money to hire an army of Brown Shirts?"
